Schedule OLGS-3P-HLF
OPTIONAL LARGE GENERAL SERVICE – 3P – HIGH LOAD FACTOR

9. Commitment Term and Minimum Term of Service. Placement on this schedule requires an agreement by the applicant to remain a bundled, full requirement Customer of the Utility for a minimum of three years (36 billing periods) from the date of the commencement of service under this schedule. This commitment to remain a bundled, full requirement Customer remains in effect even if the Customer subsequently chooses to leave service under this optional schedule, or is transferred by the Utility to the otherwise applicable rate schedule pursuant to Special Condition 8. If Customer has moved back to the otherwise applicable schedule and later applies to return to service under this schedule, the applicant must renew the agreement to remain a bundled, full requirement Customer of the Utility for a minimum of five years, commencing on the day service resumes under this schedule. Consistent with the contract (see Special Condition 14), the Commission will not approve an Application for Distribution Only Service of a Customer currently or previously served under this schedule until the Customer has fulfilled its voluntary commitment to remain a bundled, full requirement Customer. The minimum term of service under this schedule is one year, from the date of the commencement of service under this schedule, unless the Customer permanently terminates electric service to the Account. (T)
10. Non-Guarantee. The Utility is under no obligation to apply this schedule except at the express request of the Customer. The Utility does not guarantee that this schedule will benefit the Customer, including that annual electric bill savings will be realized relative to the otherwise applicable rate schedule.
11. Migration to Otherwise Applicable Rate Schedule. Once service under this schedule commences, the Customer must remain on the schedule for a minimum one year (12 Billing Periods). After this minimum service term has been satisfied, the Customer may elect to discontinue service under this schedule and be billed under the otherwise applicable rate schedule, starting at the next billing cycle. A Customer that discontinues service under this schedule will not be permitted to return to service under this schedule for a period of one year.
12. Annual Utility Review of Applicability. Utility will perform a review of the annual load factor of each Customer served under this schedule at the beginning of each calendar year, following the first 12 Billing Periods of the Customer receiving service under this schedule, using the previous 12 months billing data to assess compliance with the minimum 75% annual load factor requirement in Special Condition 8. If Customer is not in compliance with the minimum load factor requirement, the Customer will be contacted and provided the opportunity to demonstrate any extraordinary circumstances that may have contributed to the lower than minimum required load factor during the review period. Solar supporters rally in front of the Public Utilities Commission offices Wednesday, Jan 13, 2016.

anticipated order on rooftop solar rates on Friday, filed a draft ruling late Wednesday that suggested it would be unlikely for the three-member body to let more than 17,000 existing solar customers keep their more favorable rates.

In a 124-page draft order, the commissioner presiding over the solar proceedings proposed the board not grandfather existing customers for 20 years, which had been the recommendation of multiple parties involved in the case, including NV Energy and the state's consumer advocate. The draft order instead proposed extending the gradual implementation period for the increased solar bills from four years to 12 years, with four rate changes split into three-year increments.

Before its meetings, the Public Utilities Commission of Nevada, which regulates NV Energy, issues a draft ruling written by the presiding officer in the case. The draft does not reflect the opinion of the entire body, and other commissioners are allowed to suggest modifications to be considered during the meeting, raising the possibility that the language released Wednesday could still be changed.

As it is currently written, however, the draft order represents a blow to the rooftop solar industry, which was hoping the commission would at the very least reconsider its decision in December to increase bills when it tripled a fixed fee and cut the value of incentive credits for customers.

The draft order also denies appeals that challenge the basis for the bill increases.

Bring Back Solar Alliance, which is organizing a ballot measure that would revoke the commission's authority and effectively restore the prior rates, criticized the decision Wednesday evening.

"If the Public Utilities Commission adopts the proposed decision, we urge the Legislature to call a special session immediately to solve the problem that the unelected Public Utilities Commission has created," alliance spokesman Bob Greenlee said in a statement. "The Legislature has the power to immediately bring back solar for all Nevadans and to restore fairness to the over 17,000 solar customers that today's proposal would leave out in the cold."

Several lawmakers have said they support grandfathering and are closely watching the decision.

The commission had argued that the new rates were necessary to ensure that solar customers, who do not purchase as much energy from the grid and avoid paying some of the fixed costs wrapped into electricity rates, were not shifting costs to other ratepayers. The Bureau of Consumer Protection, headed by the consumer advocate, who represents

Solar advocates argued that the cost shifts were false and that the commission had not considered the benefits of solar for all ratepayers, such as its environmental impact, the reduction of strain on the utility grid, and a decreased need for NV Energy to invest in costly infrastructure projects.

Since the decision in December, solar advocates have waged a vocal campaign against the commission, urging it to reconsider its decision. The draft order takes aim at their organizing.

“(The Alliance for Solar Choice), SolarCity, and Sunrun, as well as others, have engaged in an all-out campaign to influence the public perception of the commission’s ratemaking process by claiming repeatedly that the commission is subject to regulatory capture by NV Energy and that the commission’s decisions in this proceeding are illegal, all while the proceedings before the commission were ongoing,” Commissioner David Noble, the presiding officer, wrote in the draft.

He wrote the commission cannot base decisions “on misperceptions that are largely the product of an active effort to mislead ratepayers through the dissemination of inaccurate information.”

Noble argued that by the solar industry’s calculations, customers would still save about 33 percent on their utility bills under the new rates. The solar industry has said that such arguments are misleading because while customers might save on their utility bills by not purchasing as much electricity from the grid, they would still be required to pay other costs for solar. They have argued that the cost of both bills — the utility bill and the solar bill — could therefore be greater for their customers than before they installed rooftop solar, a calculus that would discourage the technology.

Bryan Miller, president of the Alliance for Solar Choice, issued the following statement: "Noble’s contortionist twisting of the law belongs in a Vegas Cirque du Soleil show, not the halls of government. (Gov.) Brian Sandoval's legacy will be letting his hand-picked commissioners eliminate a booming industry while he complicity stays silent."

Do you actually believe either company expected our PUC and governor going to such extremes? In case you haven't noticed they both left town due to the decision. My solar company came through with everything I expected and contracted for. It was the PUC decision that screwed us. total bait and switch from NVEnergy that was approved and added on by the PUC.

So after todays PUC meeting we are screwed. Governor Sandoval issued a weak statement that the PUC did not go far enough in protecting our interests. 300%+ increase in service charge and 80% reduction in what we are paid for what we produce is what he calls not going far enough in protecting us.

Let the justice system work and hopefully undo what these people have done.

Good luck.. I would suggest adding a lawsuit against solar city and sunrun. They are the profiteers of the whole net metering scheme..

If someone bought a solar system they got the big tax credit and now mostly free of the electric company rising rates. Of course basic fees will go up, and I think it should be the same fee, but there never could be a guarantee of repurchased power at prices unless you had a contract. Therein seems to be the bigger problem. But you still have your own electric source and saving money on not buying from NV so be happy. Not all investments pan out. If you were not smart enough to get written contracts for the energy you sell you are subject to whatever they want to pay. But the reason you bought solar was to save money on your own power bill, not to be a utility company? The PUC should go a step further and have rates that are based on peak and non peak so those who can avoid peak can save and those who need it pay a little extra.

The definition of "net metering" of banking excess power on the grid like a battery 1 for 1. "Using the grid like a battery" is STILL on the NV Energy website today.

NV Energy advertised specifically "Sign up NOW to get in under the 3% cap to get the current net metering rate. After the 3% cap would be subject to new rates decided by the PUC in December." I got in on Net Metering in Feb last year well before the cap so to have my rates changed is false advertising.

@joeobremski If you have a contract for a purchase price go see a lawyer. I am guessing much of this was "promised", kind of like when Obama said if you like your insurance plan and doctor you can keep it but when the laws changed the promise went out the window. Much should be learned about doing things without written contract,, watch Judge Judy :) AT least you don't have to rely on NV for power and are saving money on electric so is not exactly worthless. I have had much worse things happen.

@peterf If you change to time of use metering, you will automatically have your rates adjusted for peak and non peak useage...However your leading analysis is a bit of a stretch...What if you bought a new car with a bank loan and after a couple years, the bank contacted you and stated that they were going to hold the engine for your car until you paid off your loan...This would be considered commercial fraud, which is much closer to what has occurred with the people who purchase roof top solar...

Net metering was set up when solar was 50x more expensive. Set up for people who wanted to go green... Not save money.

Solar panel costs are down 99% in the last 20 years and will continue to fall. The industry is mature and it is time to take the training wheels off...

Solar city's business model is based on these training wheels (above market prices, large government subsidies) and they need to adapt or go away.

Power costs on the open market are way down.

Many states (like Nevada) forced there utilities to build lots of power plants post Enron. With all these new plants peak power is a fraction of what it use to be. 0.03 to 0.08 on average.

Net metering is not a cost savings with power this cheap.

I also don't like the idea of a special class of rate payers who get better power prices than others..

To keep solar as an option when 10% 20% 40% or 80% of homes have it installed (way in the future) the rate structure had to be changed

Funny, you just argued against yourself. The PUC's ruling made a "special class of rate payers" when they raised the basic service charge only for solar customers.

Says the guy that trolls on any negative rooftop solar comment..

Very true we have already created a new class with net metering... But that is no reason to create a new class within the net metering class of customers..

Also I dont like the new fee. I think that is unfair.

I do like the new rate rooftop solar customers are compensated for the energy they generate. Power is cheap these days and we shouldn't force NVE to pay above market prices to solar city with there 20-25% profit margins.

NVEnergy must be sued by every solar resident. They promoted residential solar and laid out everything in detail including the savings and payback time. Some people were online with solar just one month before NVEnergy and the PUC changed all of the Rules. "Save $1000 a year, payback time for a $13000 investment, ~ 13 years. One to One KWH for every KWH produced. This is what they were promoting in their own video on their own website.

@trustwiz Yep. I work for a smaller solar company, and the man in this video (he's in charge of the Solar Generations rebate system) was telling us that the new rates wouldn't affect the solar industry or customers. He went so far as to tell us to continue selling solar in December. One of our NEM2 customers was very skeptical as to if he should installer solar, so he called the PUCN and NV Energy TWICE to confirm that it was wise, and they told him yes, and that he should continue forward. Talk about "bait and switch"!!!

@trustwiz Actually, that is not a bad idea. Congesting the courts with endless stacks of individual lawsuits is precisely how Scientology won against the IRS. The same proven strategy would work here as well. Expand it to the PUC as well, and it would be a nightmare they couldn't escape from.

Nobles draft order yesterday would direct NV Energy to ask for a separate line item "net energy metering subsidy". Interesting since the PUC's own study showed that net metering contributes 36 million a year to NV Energy. At this time, traditional power companies don't tell you that fossil fuels are destroying the planet's biosphere, fundamentally altering the chemical balance of the atmosphere and oceans upon which all life depends. Extinction is permanent. Species cannot be replaced, glaciers don't last and oceans rise as the planet warms. Nuclear plants poison the air and water with radiation. None of this is efficient. So the upkeep for old-style energy is higher than the traditional power companies tell you. If we can't maintain life on the only planet we have, it's not worth having a planet.

I am a net metering customer and I have a signed contract with NV Energy. The PUC is going to negate this contract. Of course you know this but seem to disregard it. How would you feel if the state came in and negated your contract with your cell phone company, your internet provider, your tv provider or any other service. How about if the state said you are not paying enough for your gardener and you need to pay 300% more. You need to understand, the PUC commissioned a study that showed that net metering customers provide 36 million to NV ENergy. Not quite enough for our esteemed governor or NV Energy.

As far as corruption. I am not going there. But if it walks like a duck.

Read the study - it also says roof top solar provides no benefit and creates only $200 million in costs if large solar projects are $80 or lower. They are now $50. So the independent study agrees with the findings in the case. There is no denying this simple fact if you support the study.

I have no problem with rate increases that are justified and fair. I am just saying that 300% seems a little excessive added to the cut in what we are paid for what we produce. This is just my opinion, but I would suggest you take a look around the state and the country and see what the overwhelming opinion is. I am not alone.

I am not calling anyone corrupt. I would like to see a little transparency in our elected officials. In case you didn't notice the solar industry left the state along with thousands of jobs.

Agreed. Small justified increase fine. I mean we do have a second meter. Charge me a fee for that but my "connection" to the grid is the same as any other house. Same wire buried in the ground that I used for 15 years pre solar and now a year on solar.

I love how the NV Energy reports talk about how much solar costs everyone but they leave off all the positive numbers. Reduced peak hours expansion of transmission lines, line losses pushing power all those miles to bring power in from outside the city, etc.

That new solar field way out I15... what is the cost of running power lines all those miles to support that?

Anyone ever see NV Energy's cost per kWh they pay during peak hours? All I ever hear is them quote the low ball $.02kWh but I'm sure that is there lowest purchase price numbers.

Lastly, net metering is defined as excess power that is banked to be used at a later time. Net Metering is NOT defined as I SELL my excess power to the power company. If it was I would have filled every inch of my roof so I could A) cover my usage 100% and have basically a $0 NV Energy bill and further B) maybe even make a few bucks.

Questionable PUCN Actions #1

The PUCN failure to investigate smart meters fires as requested by the City of Reno and Sparks Fire Chiefs suggests the PUCN is more concerned about NV Energy's unrecoverable costs than customer safety. See PUCN docket 14-09015. The PUCN attempted to close the investigation with no action in January 2015. This effort was thwarted by a local reporter.

Also see Province of Ontario Electrical Safety Authority UAC Presentation for February 26, 2015 <http://www.esasafe.com/utilities/utility-advisory-council>.

Four other utilities stopped installing the most common meter used by NV Energy due to fire safety concerns. They removed all 375,000 units and installed another brand.

Questionable PUCN Actions #2

Dockets 15-07041 and 15-07042. Paragraph 193 of the December 23 order provides detailed billing instruction for applying credit for excess energy to the energy accounts (BTER and DEAA). but is silent on the energy service charges (BTGR). Research reveals that the "subsidy" is actually an unlawful billing calculation by NV Energy. Prior to the order NV Energy violated NRS 702.775 2(c)4 by crediting BTGR for attributes excess energy did not have. This was essentially correction of a billing mistake and class misassignment.

The PUCN failed to clearly identify the root cause and to treat the problem accordingly. As a long-standing billing error, NV Energy is responsible for damages done to customers by the error.
